

Registration open for World Aquaculture 2021

Press WA2021-003

May 10, 2021

The date for WA2021 #AquacultureNow is approaching and registrations are now open. From November 15 to 19, the city of Mérida, Mexico will become the world capital of aquaculture, by celebrating the maximum meeting of the WAS.

The World Aquaculture Society (WAS) invites all the productive, academic, business, student, governmental and organizational sectors involved in aquaculture; to be participants in this event in the keynote conferences, the scientific and project presentations, the commercial exhibition and the special sessions. World Aquaculture is recognized for the successful linkage and cooperation between institutions and organizations worldwide.

Due to the pandemic caused by COVID-19, we are being very cautious and at the same time we have monitored the evolution of the pandemic in the world and specifically in Mexico, the host country of WA2021 #AquacultureNow.

We see promising advances in vaccination, we can confirm that to date WA2021 #AquacultureNow is still standing and will be carried out in person, complying with all the biosecurity measures indicated by the local authorities.

Merida is a beautiful city with an exceptional climate. Located in the state of Yucatán; cradle of the Mayan culture. It has a great tourist attraction with various destinations such as beaches, farms and cenotes.

You can now register and send the abstracts for presentation of works, the reception of projects will be open until August 6. This is essential if you want to make an oral or poster presentation of your work. Take advantage of the discounts offered by the World Aquaculture Society for first registrations.

For more information on WA2021, please visit www.was.org or contact Carolina Amézquita, carolina@was.org. To participate in the trade show, please contact Mario Stael, mario@marevent.com.